

GENERAL INDEX.

VOL. IV. NEW SERIES.

ACCIDENTS in coal-mines, chiefly occasioned by suffocation subsequent to explosions, 580-1

Acts xix. and 5. Mr. Hall's remarks on, 344

Africa, Park's mission of a journey into the interior of, 205, et seq.; commanding nature of the enterprise, 206; subjects of the volume, 208; account of Mr. Park's former discoveries in Africa, drawn up chiefly by Mr. Bryan Edwards, 209; slave trade, Mr. Park's real sentiments concerning it, 210; extract, ib.; plan of his intended operations in this second attempt, 212; fatal consequences of the delay of the expedition, ib.; equipment for the expedition, 213; Mr. P. sanguine in his hopes, 214; arrives at Madeira, 215; leaves the Gambia, 217; beset by bees, ib.; tornado, its effects on his men, 218; disasters, 219; rocky scenery near Sullo, ib.; encounter between Isaaco and a crocodile, 220; Kemi-noom, a well fortified place, ib.; arrival at the Niger, 221; Sansanding, ib.; fits up a canoe, 223; notice of his intention to embark, ib.; his journal brought back by Isaaco, ib.; reports of his death, ib.; return of Isaaco into the interior for information, ib.; his statement, 224; Mr. Park's death, as reported by the only survivor of the expedition, 225; difficulties involved in this statement, ib.; the Niger probably empties itself by the name of the Congo or Zaire, into the South Atlantic Ocean, 226

Africa, South, Campbell's travels in, 135, et seq.; expedition undertaken at the request of the London Missionary Society, 136; hasty sketch of his proceedings, ib.; arrival and stay at Capetown, 137; different effects of an African and a European climate, 138; constitutional Stoicism of the Hottentots, 139; Bethelsdorf, its dreary situation, 142; indolence of the Hottentots partly attributable to the conduct of the Dutch boors, ib.; Gonaqua nation extinct, 144; buffalo, its great strength, 144, 5; encounter between a sleeping Hottentot and a sleeping lion, ib.; dangerous attack on two lions, 146; Bushmen's dread of lions, 148, 9; features of the country, 149; Orange, or Great River, its course and breadth, ib.; prolific source of names for the use of the explorers of the terra incognita of Africa, 150; Lattakoo, ib.; manners and customs of the people described, 151; amusements of the women, ib.; royal female employments, 152; population, &c. of Lattakoo, 156; Wanketzeens, a cruel and treacherous people, 306; the travellers meet with lions and giraffes, 308; indolent character of the Hottentots, 309; asbestos rocks, ib.; insects and reptiles of South Africa almost universally venomous, 312; serpents innumerable after rain, ib. Vailant beaten by Mrs. Vanderceuthvys, 513; Mr. Campbell bears testimony to the correctness of his account of the Hottentots, ib.; great heat of the weather, ib. Albania, Hobhouse's journey through it, 525, et seq.; Ioannina, author's first view of it, 526; Pasha of Albania's family described, 527; Ioannina described, 528; its trade, &c. ib.; Tepellené, 529; some Turks irreligious, ib.; author's visit to Ali Pasha, ib.; his person, state, &c. 531; sketch of his history, ib.; his address in avoiding the dangers from the court, 532; past and present state of his government, 533; females in Albania, their situation, employments, &c. 534; robbing in Albania, its frequency, 535; Delphi, 537; Thebes, Athens, ib.; rapid decay of its splendid ruins, 538; instance of Turkish folly, 539; Grecian

INDEX

- women, their form inelegant, 540; destitute of mental cultivation, ib. et seq.; religion of the Greeks, 541; their avarice and impatience of subjection, ib.; the Troad, scepticism of the author concerning it, 542; qualifications of the author as a literary traveller, ib.
- Alexandrine recension MSS. comprised in it, 6.
- American Unitarianism, 266, et seq.; palliation of the conduct of the Boston clergy in concealing their real sentiments, 267; Negation the characteristic of Socinianism, as admitted by Mr. Wells of Boston, ib.; note, ib.; mode of propagating Socinian tenets, adopted by American Socinians, 268; on the establishment of Socinianism in Harvard college, ib.; source of the dangers attending the increase of Socinian tenets, 269; deficiencies in the prayers at Harvard college, (1813) 270; Mr. Belsham's remarks on the impossibility of persons holding tenets diametrically opposite, worshipping in the same temple, 271; Pope's universal prayer used in public worship, ib.; the orthodox termed idolaters by Dr. Freeman, ib.; spread of Socinianism in America attributed by its propagators not to the Bible, but to the writings of Dr. Priestley, 272; Christian spirit of the American reviewer, ib.
- Analogy and experience, their difference, 120, 1.
- Analysis and synthesis, (geometrical) defined, 123; illustrated, ib. et seq.
- Andalusia, its houses, &c. described, 452.
- Anderson's present state of the Russian empire, 373, et seq.; danger to be apprehended from the overgrown power of Russia, 374; character and execution of the present work, ib. et seq.; appearance of Russia, 375, 6; various character of the inhabitants of the empire, 376; Mr. A.'s mode of treating the early history of the empire, brief, ib.; violent death of the emperor Paul described, 377.
- Anster Fair, a poem, 125, et seq. inquiry into the nature of the pleasures derived from the ludicrous, ib.; origin of the ludicrous, 126; difference between the ludicrous and the simply humorous, ib.; requisites in the composition of humorous poetry, 126, 7; Anster Fair, a humorous poem, 127; origin of the octavo rhyme, 127, 8; imagined origin of the present poem, ib.; the argument, ib.; extract, 129; close of the argument, 130; crowds flocking to Anster loan, 131, 2; ushering in of the morning of the Fair, ib. et seq.; the sack-race, 132, et seq.
- Apocalyptic dragon, &c. Clarke's dissertation on, 288, et seq.; Beast, what is designed by its number, 289; three ancient modes of numbering, ib.; extract, 290; early Christians trifle on this subject, 291; mode in which the beast's number is to be found, 292; and language, ib.; names containing the number, ib.; author's objections to these names, 293; Ludovicus probably the name, 294; Beast, its symbolic signification, 295; inquiry in regard to the kingdom containing the number, ib.; extract, the woman and dragon considered, ib.; its seven heads and ten horns, 297; and tail, 298; the Beast, 385; seven heads of the Beast, 386; their double signification, ib.; the horns, 387; the two horned beast and the image, 388; Mr. C.'s application of the number Six Hundred and Sixty-Six, 389, et seq.; the little horn, 391
- Apostles, and the hundred and twenty disciples, were not baptized, 343
- Armageddon, a poem, by G. Townsend, 392, et seq.; character of the work, ib.; extract, 393; profaneness of the author, 394; apostrophe to the moon, 395
- Aristotelian logic, its aim, as developed by Mr. Dugald Stewart, 121, et seq.
- Art of evading a charitable subscription, 170, et seq.; subjects treated of, 171; extract, ib.; additional hints by the reviewer, 172
- Asbestos rocks, in South Africa, 309
- Atheists, according to Drs. Gall and Spurzheim, and Mr. Forster, are devoid of the organ of veneration, 508
- Austin on a new construction of a condenser and air pump, 58
- Baboons, or Indian money lenders, 328
- Baptism of John not Christian baptism, 343
- Battle of Waterloo, an historical record of the campaign of the Netherlands, 570. See Waterloo.
- Beast, its signification as a symbol, 295
- Beauty and deformity, Mrs. Schimmelpenninck's theory of the classification of, 543, et seq.; object of the author, ib.; definition of beauty, ib.; axioms expressing her notions, ib.; second and third species of beauty, 544; contrasts, ib.; objections to her definitions of beauty, ib.; her style of enunciating her conceptions ambiguous, ib.; inquiry whether some element of pleasure does not exist distinct from the principle of association, 513; her generic terms inappropriate, 546

INDEX.

Bees, a swarm of them attack and disperse Mr. Park's caravan, near Doosroo, in Africa, 217

Belsham, (Mr.) his opinion that persons of opposite sentiments cannot worship in the same temple, 271

Bennet's sermon on the claims of London on the zeal of Christians, 510

— on occasion of the death of Joshua Walker, Esq. 510

— on the influences of the Holy Spirit, explained and defended, 510

Bentley's epistle to Mill, its origin, 357

Berzelius and Marcel's experiments on the alcohol of sulphur, or sulphuret of carbon, 62

Bethelsdorp in South Africa, Mr. Campbell's account of, 141; its dreary situation, 142

Bible associations formed in Ireland and on the Continent, 303

Bible Society, third annual report of the Southwark auxiliary, 302, et seq.; Bible associations in Ireland, 303; on the Continent, ib.; statement of subscriptions and distributions, ib.; the poor not yet sufficiently supplied with bibles, ib.; labours of the Bible associations not temporary, 304; good effects already resulting from the Society, 305

Blackburn, Mr. J., W. Hamilton's sermon occasioned by the execution of, 280, et seq.

Bonaparte's (Lucien) Charlemagne, a poem, 226, et seq.; subject of the poem, 228; its character, ib. et seq.; on the use of machinery in the Christian epic, 231; origin and progress of the poem, 232; invocation, ib.; Laurentia and her family described, ib.; eulogy on monastic life, 234; Charles's visit to the tombs of his ancestors, 235; description of hell, 237, et seq.; Laurentia seeks an asylum in the court of Marsilius, 239; lamentation of the priest for the death of Ronald, 364, 5; the miseries of war, 365; Druids described, 366; the Huns, ib. et seq.; reflections of the author, 368; conclusion of the story, with extracts, ib. et seq.

Bourbons, their restoration principally effected by Protestant Powers, followed by a sanguinary persecution against the Protestants in the South of France, 618, et seq.

Brande's additional observations on the effects of magnesia in preventing an increased formation of uric acid, with remarks on the influence of acids upon the composition of urine, 65

British and Foreign School Society, report of for 1815, 513, et seq.; its claims, 514; its design, as considered in connexion with other societies, ib.; some account of Mr. Martin's school of Paris, 515; advanced state of public education in Holland, 517, et seq.; its origin, method of proceeding, schools, scholars, &c. ib.; reflections tending to excite attention to the subject of universal education, 519; some objections noticed, 520

Buddle's first report of a Society for preventing accidents in coal mines, 578, et seq.; terrible calamities to which colliers are exposed, 579; modes tending to obviate the danger from inflammable gas, ib.; various modes of ventilation, 580; the most fatal effects attending an explosion in a coal mine, are occasioned by suffocation, 580, 1; invention intended to remove the danger, ib.; steel-mill, its use, advantages, &c. ib.; important invention of Professor Davy, for securing the safety of the workmen in mines, (note) 582

Buonaparte Napoleon. See Giraud and Frenilly.

Burgundy, Duke of, his death, 104, 5

Bushmen in South Africa, throw their children to the lions to save themselves, 149

Butler's introduction to the mathematics, 264, et seq.; character and contents of the work, ib.

Byron's, Lord, Hebrew melodies, 94, et seq.; Jephthah's daughter, ib.; the wild gazelle, 95, 6.

Campaign of Paris, in 1814, by Giraud, 196, et seq.; fatal error of Buonaparte in the campaign of 1813, ib.; error repeated in 1814, 197; Allies enter France, ib.; Buonaparte defeated at Rothieu, ib.; profits by the error of the Allies, ib.; captures a Russian corps, ib.; drives Blücher back, 198; gains farther successes, and tears the treaty of Chatillon, ib.; defeated at Laon, 199; throws himself into the rear of the Allies, ib.; battle and capitulation of Paris, ib. et seq.; anecdotes of Buonaparte, ib.

Campbell's travels in South Africa,

I N D E X.

133, et seq.; origin of the expedition, 136; summary of his proceedings, ib.; stay at Cape-town, 137; visit to Bavian's Kloof, ib.; public worship on account of the termination of the old, and beginning of the new year, ib.; commencement of the journey to Bethelsdorp, 138; difference between an African and a European climate, ib.; equanimity of the Hottentots under the different states of climate, ib.; necessity of the mind's being systematically educated, to enjoy with correct feelings the beauties of nature in its varied exhibitions, 139; insensibility of the Hottentots towards even the majestic in the natural world, 140; their stoicism in regard to disappointments, &c. ib.; arrival at Bethelsdorp, 141; census of the inhabitants, ib.; appearance of the settlement, 142; alleged indolence of the Hottentots principally owing to the Dutch boors, ib. and extract; author's estimate of the religious and moral state of the settlement, 144; Gonaqua nation extinct, ib.; surprising strength of the buffalo, 144, 5; singular encounter between a sleeping Hottentot and a sleeping lion, ib.; dangerous attack upon two lions, 146; remarks on the author's reflections on the uninhabited wastes of Africa, ib.; extract from a Hottentot sermon, 148; partiality of lions for Bushmen, 149; its cause, ib.; party cross the Orange river, ib.; arrival at Lattakoo, 150; manners, &c. of the people, 151; hints to the managers of the opera, ib.; extreme noisiness of the natives, 153; employments of the queen and princesses, 154; their opinion of the origin of mankind, 155; arrival of the king, ib.; success of the enterprise, ib.; population, &c. of the city, 156; author's opinion in regard to a missionary experiment there, 157; Wanketzeens cruel and treacherous, 306; travellers meet with lions and giraffes, 308; excessive indolence of the Hottentots, 309; asbestos rocks, ib.; children in South Africa exposed to innumerable dangers from scorpions, venomous flies, &c. 312; death of Mrs. Sass, ib.; serpents abundant after rain, ib.; Vaillant soundly drubbed by Mrs. Vanderoesthuis, 313; Vaillant's account of the Hottentots declared by Mr. Campbell to be very correct, ib.; heat of the weather, ib.
Cannibals, a nation of, supposed to exist to the south of Sego, in Africa, 222

Carpe Diem, or the true policy of Europe at the present juncture, with regard to France, 421

Cataracts of Gothen, 24; of Halslund, 25

Chalmers on the evidence and authority of the Christian revelation, 37, et seq.; deep interest of the subject, ib.; impure nature of the Christian system, as adopted and authorized by popes and emperors, ib.; origin of the inquiry, into 'the evidence and authority of the Christian faith,' ib.; value of Mr. Chalmers's work, ib.; lowest degree of evidence requisite to command the assent of conscience in favour of Christianity, 39, et seq.; on an inquirer's forming a decision in regard to the question, whether Christianity be the religion which merits his confidence, 40; Mr. Chalmers's modest claims, 41; positive proofs in favour of Christianity abundant, ib.; on ascertaining the true state of the fact, 42, 3; the truth and authority of the Christian religion dependent on the reality of certain events, 43; difficulties in the way of forming an unbiassed judgment in regard to testimony, 44; tendency to prefer heathen to Christian testimony, 45; extract from Mr. C. on this subject, ib. et seq.; internal marks of the truth of the New Testament, 47, et seq.; strength of the testimony of the original witnesses, 49; extract, 50; futility and delusive nature of the objection drawn from the rejection of Christianity by the Jews, 51; on the objection that Christian miracles are not attested by heathen writers, 52; on the objections of sceptical Geologists, 53; the author's remarks on the infidel's objections from internal evidence, obscurely expressed, 54; character and estimate of the treatise, 55, 6

Charitable subscription, art of evading one, 170, et seq.; subjects of the treatise, 171; additional hints, 172

Charlemagne, or the Church delivered, a poem, by Lucien Bonaparte, 226, et seq.; the subject, 228; character of the work, ib.; author's remarks on the machinery of a Christian epic, 231; invocation, 232; description of Laurentia and her sons, ib.; eulogy on monastic life, 234; Charles visits the tombs of his ancestors, 235; description

I N D E X.

- of hel, 237 ; Laurentia at the court of Maratius, 239 ; priest's lamentation over Ronald, 364, 5 ; war, some of its miseries portrayed, 365 ; description of the Druids, 366 ; Huns described, and their encampment, ib. et seq. ; reflections of the author, 368 ; conclusion of the story, and extract, ib. et seq.
- Chatillou, treaty of, torn by Buonaparte in a moment of success, 199
- Chincough, Dr. Watt on the history, nature, and treatment of, 487, et seq. ; fever constantly attendant on the disease, 488, belongs to the order of inflammatory affections, ib. ; varieties of the fever, ib. et seq. ; report of an examination of subjects who fell victims to it, 490 ; summary of our actual knowledge of the disease, 492 ; measles more fatal since the prevalence of vaccination, 493 ; result of the Glasgow tables of deaths, ib. ; similar result afforded by the London bills of mortality, 494 ; Dr. W.'s opinion that the increased mortality from the measles is in consequence of the partial extermination of the small pox, ib. ; different result from the observations of Dr. Stanger, ib. ; farther results requisite to form just conclusions on the subject, 495
- Christian baptism instituted subsequently to the eucharist, 343
- Christian Courtesy, a sermon, by Mr. Knight, 511, 12 ; address to ministers and students, ib.
- Christiana, description of, 26
- Christian revelation, Chalmers on the evidence and authority of, 37, et seq. ; Christianity under the popes and emperors impure, ib. ; use and tendency of freedom of inquiry, 37, 8 ; efficiency of Mr. Chalmers's work, ib. ; the least preponderance of evidence is binding, 39 ; essential difference between contradiction and difficulty, 40 ; on forming a decision on the question, Whether Christianity be that system of religion which deserves confidence, ib. ; aim of Mr. C. in writing this treatise, 41 ; plea of a deficiency of evidence in regard to the truth of Christianity ill founded, ib. ; remarks on ascertaining the true state of the fact, 42 ; truth and authority of the Christian religion depend on the reality of certain events, 43 ; difficulties in deciding on testimony under certain circumstances, 44 ; general tendency to prefer heathen to Christian testimony, 45 ; marks of Mr. C. on this subject, ib. ; on the internal marks of truth in the New Testament, 47, et seq. ; strength of the testimony of the original witnesses, 49 ; extract, 50 ; objection drawn from the rejection of Christianity by the Jews, delusive, 51 ; remarks on the objection that the Christian miracles are not attested by heathen writers, 52 ; remarks on the objections of sceptical Geologists, 53
- Church delivered, a poem, by Lucien Bonaparte. See Bonaparte.
- Claims of London on the zeal of Christians, a sermon, by Mr. Bennet, 510
- Claims of the Established Church. See Established Church.
- Claunny on the means of procuring a steady light in coal mines, without the danger of explosion, 65
- Clarke on the apocalyptic dragon, 288, et seq. ; what is intended by counting the number of the beast, 289 ; modes of numbering prevalent in ancient times, ib. ; extract, 290 ; trifling of the early Christians in this respect, 291 ; author's inquiries as to the mode, and language in which the number is to be sought, 292 ; instances of names supposed to contain the number, ib. ; objections by the author, 293 ; some reasons in favour of its being Ludovicus, 294 ; signification of the symbol Beast ib. ; inquiry into the kingdom containing the number, 295 ; extract, ib. ; the woman and the dragon considered, ib. ; seven heads of the dragon, 297 ; ten horns, ib. ; and tail, 298 ; the beast considered, 385 ; author's opinion, ib. ; the seven heads of the beast, 386 ; their double meaning, ib. ; ten horns of the beast, 387 ; two horned beast and the image, 388 ; author's application of the number SIX HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX, 389, et seq. ; and of the little horn, 391
- Classical studies, great advantages resulting from commencing them by reading the best poets, 409
- Clwyd, the vale of, or Cona, a poem, 588, et seq. ; the tale, ib. ; extracts, ib. et seq.
- Coal mines, Buddle's first report of a society for preventing accidents in, 578, et seq. ; dreadful accidents incident to colliers, 579 ; various modes of obviating the danger from inflammable gas, ib. ; on ventilations, 580 ; suffocation subsequent to explosion, the principal occasion of the fatal accidents in coal mines, 580, 1 ; at-

INDEX.

- tempts to obviate its effects, ib.; use of the steel-mill, ib.; a security lantern, lately invented by Professor Davy, (note) 582
- Coal mines, Clanny on the means of procuring a steady light in, without the danger of explosion, 65
- Cobbin's statement of the persecution of the Protestants in the south of France, since the restoration of the Bourbons, 618, et seq.; conduct of the French Protestants on the restoration of the Bourbons, 618; sanguinary acts of the Papists, 619; thirteen Protestants killed by one assassin, ib.; conduct of the Duc d'Angoulême unsatisfactory, (note) ib.; attempt on the life of General De la Garde, ib.; petition from the persecuted Protestants coldly received, and not replied to, by Louis XVIII, 620; extract from a letter by M. Desmont, senior pastor of the Church at Nîmes, ib.
- Cobbold's, Elizabeth, victory of Waterloo, 570; extract, 577
- Cona, or the vale of Clwyd, a poem, 588, et seq.; the tale, ib.; extracts, ib. et seq.
- Congo river. See Zaire.
- Cooper's practical sermons, 609, et seq.; style of composition adapted to sermons peculiar, ib.; practice of accommodating the words of Scripture to foreign purposes injudicious and dangerous, 610; the example of Jesus Christ binding on his followers, 611; conduct of Jesus Christ toward the individual considered, 612; on mercy, its true nature, &c. ib.
- Coquettes, paradise of, a poem, 86, 7
- Corps des Patineurs, 26
- Cracknell's commendatory preface to Dr. Jennings's Scripture testimony, 19
- Crocodiles, numerous in the Gambia, 217; Isaaco, Mungo Park's guide, seized by one, 220
- Dacoity, its practice in India, 320; cruel revenge of two condemned dacoits, 332
- Davy's further observations on a new detonating substance, 68; experiments and observations on the substances produced in different chemical processes on fluor spar, 71
- Davy's lantern for obviating the danger from explosions in coal mines, (note) 582
- Delinquency, moral, its certain and only corrective, upon the principles of craniology, 509; see Forster's sketch
- Desmont M. senior pastor of the church at Nîmes, extract from a letter of his, 620
- Despotic government established in Norway in accordance with the wishes of the people, 36
- Despotic government, its demoralizing tendency, and causes, ib.; character of Buonaparte's despotism, 404
- Dewar's sermon at the Gaelic chapel, 300 et seq.; deficiency of religious instruction in some districts of Scotland, ib.; and extract ib.; destitute state of Iona, 301
- Display, a tale by Miss Jane Taylor, 158, et seq.; inquiry into the difference between a novel and a tale, ib.; requisites for writing a tale upon correct principles, ib.; instances of success, ib. et seq., defects and excellencies of Miss Edgeworth as a writer of moral tales, 159; design of the present work, ib.; descriptive portraits of the characters, 160 et seq.
- Display, the chief feature of the Parisian character, 407
- Dissertations and letters by Don J. Rodriguez, Chevalier Delambre, Baron de Zack, Dr. T. Thomson, Dr. Gregory, &c. tending to impugn or to defend the trigonometrical survey of England and Wales, by Col. Mudge and Capt. Colby, 505, 6
- Discourses, practical, by Mr. Paterson, 378; object of the writer, ib.; character of the discourses, 379; objectionable expressions, 381, et seq.; false taste of the Author, 383
- Dodsworth's historical account of the episcopal see, and cathedral church of Sarum, or Salisbury, 434, et seq.; nature of the associations awakened by contemplating our Cathedral Churches, ib. et seq.; number of the plates, artists, &c. 437; author's performance descriptive of the plates, ib.; contents of the first part, ib.; conduct of the ecclesiastics during the reign of Stephen, 439; Dr. Duppa alleged to have assisted in the composition of the Eikon Basilike, ib.; contents of the second part, 439, et seq.; Old Sarum cathedral founded by Osmund, 440; character of Osmund, ib.; extensive and remarkable grant of John to the clergy, ib.; situation of Old Sarum described, and the removal of the citizens, ib.; commencement of Salisbury cathedral, 441; indulgencies granted, in aid of the building, 442, singular ceremony of electing annually one of the singing boys to sustain the formalities of a bishop, ib.; some account of St. Nicholas, ib.; miracles performed at the tomb of Osmond, 444; his canonization, 445; tower and spire added to the church, ib.; its liability to serious accident, ib.; inclination of the spire occasioned by the sinking of the pillars, 447; supposed relic of the Virgin Mary discovered at the uppermost point, ib.

INDEX.

Domingo, St. some facts in connexion with the intended French expedition to that place, stated, 200

Duppa, Dr. stated to have assisted in the composition of the EIKON BASILIKE, 439

Edgeworth's Maria, continuation of early lessons, 401, 2

Edgeworth, Miss, her defects and excellencies as a moral writer, 159

Eneid, specimen of a blank verse translation of it, by T. Grinfield, 280

Established Church, claims of 454, et seq.; aim of the author, 455, 6; powers and rights claimed by the writer, as delegated to the established Church by Christ and his apostles, 456, 7; inquiry into what constitutes the church, ib. et seq.; it derived its origin from the state, 459; scriptural meanings of the term church, ib. et seq.; on the term bishop or overseer, 460; each congregation had its own bishop, ib.; assertion that Christ deposited his authority with the Apostles, with the power of delegation, 461; that this power of delegation was twofold, 462; Church, as established by the Apostles, asserted to be characterized by two grand fundamental principles, 463; the three orders of bishops, presbyters, and deacons, declared to be stated in the New Testament, ib.; the Apostles stated to have delegated their authority, especially the power of ordination, 465; author's proof of Titus's having been consecrated to the episcopal office, ib.; scripture affords no proof of three orders, ib. et seq.; angels of the Revelation, asserted to mean bishops, 467; author's reference to the Fathers in proof of three orders, considered, ib. et seq.; writings of the Fathers not authoritative beyond the writings of other men, 471; the sacred writings only authoritative, ib.; arguments of the episcopal writers against the Romish Church equally conclusive against themselves, 472; author's assertions contradictory to scripture, 540; 'Dr. Campbell on the essence of Christianity,' 551; ministerial labours, even where Episcopal Ordination cannot be attained, has not apostolical sanction, 553; all persons ordained by a bishop in the Established Church, are declared to be true ministers of Christ, 554; reading the bible without an interpreter, tends to generate spiritual pride, 555; authority of the church as an interpreter vested in its Creeds and Articles, 556; author's bold assertion that no controversy upon fundamentals can arise between those who conscientiously subscribe the articles, ib.; reviewer's appeal to, and statement of, a difference on essential points between some members of the Establishment, 557; Author's remarks on apostolical succession, and on separation, 560; spiritual descent of the bishops examined, 561; rise and progress of the Established Church, 561, et seq.; Archbishop Parker, the root of present episcopacy in England, was not consecrated by bishops, 562; these alleged successors of the apostles, appointed by lay patronage, &c. ib.; disproportionate salaries in the church, 564; extract from the Christian Observer tending to disprove Mr. Cunningham's assertion of the efficacious influence of the Church formularies, 565; author's declaration that the Gospel is preached in the church, ib.; neglect, in the first instance, of Dr. Bell, and his system, by the clergy in general, 566; Church of England compared with the Church of Christ, in regard to the power of the people, &c. ib.; to the celebration of the Lord's Supper, ib.; to excommunication, ib.; to absolution, quotation from Horsley and Towgood, 568; conclusion and general reflections, 569

Euripides, his manner of carrying on a Dialogue defended by Professor Porson, 360

Evangelical ministry, Jay's sermon on the importance of, 93

Estlin's general prayer-book, 189, et seq.; the writer's views of dissent crude and low, 190; inquiry into the principles common to all Christians, 191; character of the prayers on the renunciation of human merit, as the ground of acceptance with God, 192; the Doctor's opinion of the doctrine of Divine influence, ib.

INDEX.

Field of Waterloo, a poem by Walter Scott, 570; extracts, 575, et seq.

Fellowes's Paris, during the interesting month of July, 1815, 510

Fontenoy, address of Louis XV. to his son on the day after the battle of, 248

Forster's sketch of the new anatomy and physiology of the brain and nervous system of Drs. Gall and Spurzheim, 507, et seq.; atheists stated to be devoid of the organ of veneration, 508; necessary moral consequences of this state of organization, ib.; the will made up of brainular matter, 508; organs of the will, ib.; the only and necessary correctives for moral delinquency, according to the system of organization, &c. ib. et seq.; insanity declared to be always corporal, 509

France, Lacretelle's history of, during the 18th century, 102, et seq.; political and domestic calamities of Louis XIVth, 104; Death of the Duke of Burgundy, 104, 5; profligate regency of the Duke of Orleans, 106, 7; and extract, ib.; germe of the French revolution traceable to this period, ib.; degradation of the church in France, and its causes, ib.; character of Cardinal Fleury's regency, 108; unsettled state of Poland, and its effects on Europe, ib.; misfortunes of Stanislaus, 109; elevation of his daughter to the crown of France, ib.; calamitous situation of Maria Theresa, 241; her appeal to the Hungarian states, ib.; joins in the dismemberment of Poland, 242; Louis XV. wonders why his subjects should lament his illness, ib.; ascendency of Madame Pompadour over his mind, ib.; immorality of his court, 243; execrated by the French at his death, ib.; state of France on the accession of Louis XVI, 244; the author composed his history under restriction, 245; 18th century, the age of human butchery, 248; Louis XV, address to his son after the battle of Fontenoy, ib.; reflections of Marshal Saxe on the evening preceding a battle, ib.; moral improvement of the world very slow, 249

Francis, St. de Sales, memoirs of, 614; sketch of his life, 615; et seq.; his distress of mind and recovery, ib.; attempts to convert Beza to the Romish faith, 616; his zeal in his missionary labours, ib.; his great success in converting Calvinists into Papists, 617; his canonization, 618

French church, its degradation by the elevation of persons of infamous character to its highest stations, 107

French females; see Scott's Visit to Paris

Frenilly Monsieur de, considerations relative to a year of the history of France, 421, et seq.; cause of the difference between the revolutionary changes in England and those of other countries, ib.; evils arising from the sources of information on political subjects being under the control of party writers, 425; importance of passing circumstances, considered as the materials of future history, 424; author's qualifications, ib.; advantages and disadvantages of a contemporary and retrospective survey of great transactions considered, ib.; state of England at the return of Charles II., as contrasted with that of France on the return of Louis XVIIIth, (1814), 426; annihilation of the nobility in France, 427; author's remarks on the state of religion in France, 428, 9; reflections on the subject of an attempt to revive religion in France, 430; on the morals and national character of the French, 431, et seq.; true foundation of the national character of the English, as it differs from that of other countries, 433; reflections on, and probable causes of the complacent admiration, with which Buonaparte's character is viewed and estimated by many in this country, 581; infidelity of the most determined nature, the basis of his character, 593; unfeeling rather than cruel, 593; extract, ib.; his utter contempt of truth, 594; folly of acting on the supposition of reformation in regard to his character, ib.; his alleged reformation utterly groundless, ib. et seq.; M. de F.'s remarks on the character of Buonaparte, and the means thrown into his hands, 596; his character as a politician, &c. ib.; Buonaparte an extraordinary man, 597; allies justifiable in renouncing all alliance with the Buonaparte family, 599; existence of Buonaparte as ruler of France incompatible with the safety and quiet of Europe, ib.; a system of aggression the necessary result of the peculiar nature of his despotism, ib.

Gaelic chapel, Dewar's sermon preached in it, 300, et seq.; great deficiency of public instruction in some districts of the Highlands, ib.; extract; Iona, its desolate state in regard to religious instruction, 301

Garde, General de la, attempt on his

INDEX.

life by one of the sanguinary banditti of Roman Catholic persecutors in the South of France, (note) 620

General prayer-book by Dr. Estlin, 189, et seq.; character of the prayers, 191

Gilbert's power of God in the soul of man, a sermon, 512, 3; leading subjects of the discourse, ib.

Girard's campaign of Paris, in 1814, 196, et seq.; consists of abstracts from gazettes, &c. ib.; obstinacy and fatal error of Buonaparte in the campaign of 1813, ib.; repeats this error, 197; Allies pour into France, ib.; defeat of Buonaparte at Rothiere, ib.; profits by the error of the Allies, ib.; captures the corps of Alsufief, ib.; assaults Blucher and drives him back, 198; steady firmness of the Prussians, ib.; farther advantages gained by Buonaparte, ib.; he tears the treaty of Chatillon, ib.; defeat of the French, at Laon, 199; Buonaparte throws himself into the rear of the Allies, ib.; Allies advance on Paris, ib.; battle of Paris, ib.; capitulation of Paris, 200; characteristic anecdotes of Buonaparte, ib.

Gospel, its genius spiritual, not ceremonial, 355

Grecian women inelegant, 540; utterly destitute of mental cultivation, ib.

Gregory's dissertations and letters, relating to the trigonometrical survey of England and Wales, by Col. Mudge and Capt. Colby, 505, et seq.; beneficial tendency of Dr. Gregory's collection of letters on this subject, 506

Gregory's letters to a friend on the evidences, doctrines, and duties of the Christian religion, 194, et seq.; improvements of this edition stated, ib.; futility of the Socinian argument that Jesus suffered as an example of patience and resignation, 195

Grinfield's poems, &c. 273, et seq.; character and contents of the volume, ib.; poetic description of morning and evening, 274; poem on memory, 275; Killicrankie, battle of, 276, 7; fancy-view of the submarine world, 278, 9; specimen of a blank verse translation of the Eneid, 280

Griesbach's systematical classification of manuscripts, Dr. Lawrence's remarks on, 1, et seq.; Griesbach, the first reformer of the Greek text of the New Testament on critical principles, ib.; his theological sentiment, ib.; literary estimate of his second edition of the New Testament, 3; exposition of some errors, 4; and misquotations, ib.; his decisions not always in accordance with those in his Synbolæ Criticæ, ib.; his system opposed by Dr. Lawrence, 3; basis of his system, 6; his three recensions, with the MSS. comprised under each, 6, 7; his system unsupported by history or tradition, 8; on what founded, 9; objection stated, 10; existence of the Alexandrine recension not proved, 12; his classification too limited, ib.; his mode of deciding on a classification of MSS. objected to, 13; his calculations inaccurate, 15, et seq.; objections against the structure of Griesbach's system, 173; his promises uncertain, 176; 'principal use of recensions,' as stated by Griesbach, 179; objection to Griesbach's decision on the reading of 1 Tim. iii. 16, 183, et seq.; Dr. Lawrence's comments of Griesbach's statement, the versions, 185; benefits resulting from Griesbach's labours, 189

Gaul, river, its sudden disappearance and fatal consequences, 34

Hall on the terms of communion, 339, et seq.; the church of Christ on earth, visible and undivisible, ib.; not an exclusive church, ib.; tendency of the Romish church to secularize every thing, 339; an essential difference between the church of Rome and the reformed National churches, 340; their notions of the ordinances of the church unscriptural, ib.; object of the present work, ib.; principle on which the strict baptists exclude other Christians from their community, generally prevalent in the Christian world, 341; the anomaly, as it regards the strict baptist, ib.; Mr. Hall's remarks on the communion of saints, ib., et seq.; subjects of the first part of Mr. Hall's work, 343; Christian baptism not the baptism of John, but instituted subsequently to the eucharist, ib.; Mr. Hall's remarks on the apostolic precedent in regard to eucharistic communion, ib., baptism by the apostles during the ministry of our Saviour, identified with that of John, 344; the apostles and the 120 disciples were never baptized, ib.; Acts 19 and 5, considered, ib.; Mr. Hall in reply to Mr. Booth in regard to admitting unbaptized believers to the Lord's Table, 345; extravagant notions of the efficacy of baptism, entertained by early Chris-

I N D E X.

- tians and others, ib.; subjects of the second part of the work, 346, 7; duty of cultivating a warm attachment to 'the members of Christ's body,' 347; a plurality of true churches not in communion with one another repugnant to the principles of the scriptures, 348; Mr. Hall's definition of schism, 349; religious societies bound to preserve the purity, &c. of their communion, ib.; inefficacy of terms of communion for this purpose, 350; communion with a Christian society not to be had at the expense of Christian liberty, 351; modern dissent chiefly occasioned by the terms of communion, ib.; exclusion of dissenters from the church of England, intended as a punishment, 352; uniformity in religious matters, by human compulsion, unlawful and contrary to the spirit of the gospel, 353; hopes of the author, as to the result of the adoption of his principles, 354; genius of the gospel spiritual, not ceremonial, 355
- Hamilton's sermon, occasioned by the execution of Mr. J. Blackburn, 280, et seq.; general character of the sermon, ib.; extract, as a specimen of Mr. W. Hamilton's style, 282; reflections suggested by the publication, ib. et seq.
- Hanbury's extracts from Mr. Williams's diary, 396, et seq. pious resolutions, 397, letter to his daughter, 398; on the declining state of religion among the dissenters in his day, 399
- Harvard college, remarks on the establishment of Socinianism there, 268
- Hebrew melodies by Lord Byron, 94, et seq.; Jephthah's daughter, ib.; the wild gazelle, 95, 6
- Henry and his bearer, the history of, 401
- Hints from an invalid mother to her daughter, 504, 5; principal subjects of the work, ib.; nature and efficacy of Christian patience, ib.
- Historical sketch of the translation and circulation of the scriptures from the earliest period, 284, et seq.; Bible society liberally supported by the people and clergy of Scotland, ib., opposition of the synod of Merse and Tiviotdale, 286; reflections on their proceedings, 287, et seq.; contents of the sketch, 288
- History of Henry and his bearer, 401
- Hobhouse's journey through Albania, &c. 525, et seq.; first view of Ioannina, 526; some account of the Pasha of Albania's family, 527; description of Ioannina, 528; its trade, &c. ib.; arrival at Tepellene, 529; some Turks irreligious, ib.; Albanian mode of summoning to prayers, 530; author's visit to the Pasha, ib.; his person described, ib.; his state, 531; slight sketch of his history, ib.; his address in avoiding the dangers of an elevated situation in the state, 532; state of the country, prior to, and under, his government, ib.; his barbarity, 533; state of females in Albania, 534; robbing and stealing essentially different in Albania, 535; mistatement of Lady Mary W. Montagu, ib.; arrival at Delphi, 537; Thebes, &c. ib.; Athens, ib. et seq.; rapid decay of its ruins, 538; instance of Turkish avarice and stupidity, 539; form of the Grecian women inelegant, 540; modern Grecian women, utterly destitute of mental cultivation, ib. et seq.; religion of the Greeks, 541; their avarice, ib.; impatience of subjection, ib.; author sceptical in regard to the Troad, 542; general estimate of his qualifications as a literary traveller, ib.
- Holland, favourable state of its schools, number of scholars, &c. 517, 8
- Horne on the formation of fat in the intestines of living animals, 58
- Horne's additions to an account of the anatomy of the Squalus Maximus, contained in a former paper; with observations on the bronchial artery, 67
- Hottentots, their indolence partly occasioned by the conduct of the Dutch boors, 142
- Hottentot woman, her whole family devoured by lions, &c. 144
- Humorous in poetry, differs from the ludicrous, 126; requisites in the composition of the humorous 126, 7
- Hydrocephalus, Yeats on the early symptoms of it, 250, et seq.; prominent importance of the subject, 251; subdivisions of the grastic theory of medicine, 251, et seq.; opinion of Dr. Yeats as to the original seat of the complaint, 255; objections, ib. et seq.; reasons proving it to originate in the head, 256; Dr. Yeats's account of its symptoms in a little girl, 257, et seq.; symptoms indicative of its commencement, 259; characteristic symptoms distinguishing it from some other disorders, 260; cautions in regard to its exciting causes, 262; treatment 263
- Hypothesis, vindication of its right use, 125
- Index to the anatomical, medical, chirological, and phisiological papers,

INDEX.

- contained in the transactions of the royal society of London, 396
- India, Tytler's present political state of, 318, et seq.; British community ill informed as to the state of India, its causes, ib.; duty of the British to compel a good government in India, 319; correct information as to the government of India, of difficult attainment, 320; obligation due to Mr. Tytler for his work, 321; wilful delusion of the company's servants in regard to the lower classes in India, 322; extract, illustrative of this remark, 323; leading topics of the work, 325; youths sent to India generally ill qualified for the purpose, 326; their mode of obtaining money, 327; become subject to the control of the Baboos, 328; who eventually govern the country, ib.; the great body of the people poor, 329, extract; prevalence of crime, ib.; Dacoity, ib.; cruelties of the Dacoits, 330; Bengalee's great disregard of truth, 331; revenge of two condemned Dacoits, 332; causes of the great prevalence of delinquency in India, ib.; effects of poverty, ib.; inquiry into the causes of the poverty of the British subjects in India, 333; extract; imperfection of the administration of justice in India, 334, extract, ib. et seq.; vices, &c. of the police, 337; management of the jails, ib.
- Indulgences granted in aid of the expense attending the erection of Salisbury cathedral*, 442
- Influences of the Holy Spirit explained and defended, a sermon by Mr. Bennet, 510
- Insanity always corporal, according to chronological principles, 509; see Forster's sketch
- Ioannina, its appearance, 526; its size, population, &c 528
- Iona, island of, its destitute state in regard to religious ordinances, 301
- Jamieson on the construction of maps, 168, et seq.; contents of the treatise, 169; its character, ib.
- Jay's sermon on the importance of an evangelical ministry, 93, 4; popularity of Mr. Jay, ib.; its probable causes as illustrated by an extract from his own sermon, ib.
- Jennings's scripture testimony, 193, 4
- Jerdan's Paris Spectator, 608, et seq.; the work strictly descriptive of Parisian manners, 606; a picture of modern French rural retirement, ib. et seq.; le colimaçon, 608; translation, ib.
- Keminoom, a well fortified city in the interior of Africa, 220; thievish propensity of the natives, ib.
- Killicrankie, battle of, from Grinfield's poems, 276, 7
- Knight's Christian courtesy, a sermon, 511, 2; extracts, ib.
- Kitchen library, of what it should consist, 92
- Lacretelle's history of France during the eighteenth century, 102, et seq.; objections to the supposed superiority of the ancients, as historical writers, over the moderns, ib.; superiority of the moderns in the development of the moral features of history, 103; ancients mere sciolists on certain branches connected with the knowledge of the philosophy of history, 103; political reverses of Louis XIV., ib. et seq.; his domestic calamities, 104; death of the duke of Burgundy, 104, 5; profligacy of the regency of the duke of Orleans, 106, 7; extract, 107; germe of the French revolution to be traced to this period, ib.; degradation of the Gallican church, by the elevation of infamous persons to its highest stations, ib.; character of the regency of Cardinal Fleury, 108; troubles in Europe, occasioned by the unsettled state of Poland, ib.; misfortunes of Stanislaus, and elevation of his daughter to the crown of France, 109; disastrous situation of Maria Theresa, 241; her appeal to the Hungarian states, ib.; confederates in the dismemberment of Poland, 242; surprise of Louis XV. at finding his illness lamented by his subjects, ib.; influence of Madame Pompadour over this prince, ib.; depravity of the court of Louis, XV., 243; his memory detested by the French, ib.; state of France on the accession of Louis XVI., 244; the author has composed his history under restriction, 245; the eighteenth century, the age of human butchery, 248; Louis XVth's address to his son after the battle of Fontenoy, ib.; reflections of Marshal Saxe on the evening preceding a battle, ib.; moral improvement of the world very slow, 249
- Lamotte's voyage dans le nord de l'Europe, 22, et seq.; occasion of the excursion, and the quality of the travellers,

INDEX.

- 23; state of northern posting, 24; cataracts of Gothen, ib.; and of Hallsund, 25; pass of Swinsund, author's sensations on approaching it, 25; enthusiasms of Sir Sydney Smith, ib.; Christiania, 26; corps des patineurs, ib.; lake Miosson, 27, 8; valley of Guldbrandal, 29; moral character of the natives, ib.; bridge of Ström-Broe, 30; idolatry banished from the valley; its cause, 31; author luckily hurt by an unfortunate fall, 31; ascent of Sneehulten, 31; fête champêtre, 33; disappearance of the Guul river, and its fatal consequences, 34; Rörösa, ib.; slight notice of the miners, 34; sudden arrest of the party and confinement at Kongsberg, 35; the government rendered despotic by desire of the people, 36; ecclesiastical constitution, ib.
- Lanthorn invented by Professor Davy for obviating the dangers occasioned by explosions in coal mines, 582;
- Lattakoo, an African city, described by Mr. Campbell, 150, et seq.
- Laurence's Dr., remarks on Griesbach's classification of MSS. 1, et seq.; Griesbach the first reformer of the Greek text of the New Testament on critical principles, ib.; his theological principles, ib.; general estimate of his second edition of the New Testament, 3; instances of some errors in it, 4; and misquotations, ib.; his decisions on some passages not in accordance with those in his Symbolæ Criticæ, ib.; his system examined and opposed by Dr. Laurence, 5; basis of Griesbach's system, 6; his three Recensions, ib.; MSS. comprised under each, 6, 7; object of the critic, in regard to this system, 7; on deciding on the genuineness of a reading, from MS. authority, ib.; Griesbach's system unsupported by history or tradition, 8; its foundation, 9; objection to it stated, 10; commenced without sufficient data, ib.; MSS. incompletely collated, 11; Dr. Laurence's opinion, that the existence of the Alexandrine recension has not been proved, 12; and that Griesbach's classification is too limited, ib.; his objection against Griesbach's mode of deciding upon the classification of a MS. 13; experiment with the Alexandrine text, as exhibited in the readings of Origen, 14; inaccuracy of Griesbach's calculation, 15, et seq.; mode suggested by Dr. Laurence for ascertaining the classification of MSS. 18; illustration of it, ib.; Dr. Laurence's errors numerous, 20; instances, 21; reviewer's objection to the structure of Griesbach's system, 173; table of the readings of the Alexandrine MS. and Origen, compared with the received text, in the 1 chap. Romans, 174; mode of ascertaining the true character of Origen's reading, 175; uncertainty of Griesbach's premises, 176; farther difficulties, 177, 8; 'principal use of recensions,' 179; remarks on the readings of 1 Tim. iii. 16, ib.; varying testimonies in regard to the reading of A and C, 180; objection to Griesbach's decision in favour of ō, 183, et seq.; Dr. Laurence's comment on Griesbach's statement of the versions, 185; external evidence in favour of ō, 187; final remarks of Dr. Laurence, ib.; great advantages resulting from Griesbach's labours, 189
- Legend of the Velvet Cushion, 65, et seq.; why termed a legend, 76; subjects treated of, ib.; writer's qualifications, ib.; legend and Velvet Cushion contrasted, 77; forbearance of the dissenters in regard to points of minor consequence, 78; establishments unfriendly to liberty, 79, et seq.; improved state of religious liberty to be attributed to the spirit of the times, not the principles of the establishment, 80; extract, 81; loyalty of the dissenters, 82; remarks on the implied right of the civil magistrate to interfere in matters of religion, ib. et seq.; dangerous consequences of admitting this right, 84; the principle of the work, ib.; extract illustrative of the author's style, 85
- Lessons early, Maria Edgeworth's continuation of, 401, 2
- Letters on the evidences, doctrines, and duties of the Christian religion, by Dr. Gregory, 194; additional matter of this edition stated, ib.; futility of the Socinian argument that Jesus suffered as an example of patience and resignation, 159
- Letter to the Right Hon. Lord Erskine, on the present situation of France and Europe, 421, et seq.
- L'Hermite de la Chaussée-d'Antin, see Jerdan's Paris Spectator
- Longitude and latitude at sea, Mycrs's translation of Rossel's practical treatise on, 88, et seq.
- Louis XIV., his political reverses, 103; domestic calamities, 104
- Louis XV., anecdotes of him, 242, 245;

INDEX.

Ludicrous in poetry, inquiry into the nature of the pleasures derived from it, 125; origin of the ludicrous, 126; difference between the ludicrous and the simply humorous, ib.

Madrid, picture of, 450

Magnificence of Paris, 409

Manual of devotion, 505

Manual of Latin Grammar by Dr. J. P. Smith, 495, et seq.; advantages of the present work, 496; some slight innovations on the ancient mode pointed out, 496; omissions stated, ib.; reasons for giving a decided preference to this manual, 498; principles of prosody very judiciously and clearly explained, ib.; essential advice to self-instructors, 499

Maps, Jamieson on the construction of, 168, et seq.

Marcet's experiments on the production of cold by the evaporation of the sulphuret of carbon, 70

Maria Theresa, her appeal to the Hungarians when driven from Germany, 241

Martin's, Mr. school at Paris for training monitors, 515

Mathematics, Butler's introduction to 264, et seq.; character and contents, ib.;

Miosson, lake of described, 27, et seq.;

Miracles performed at the tomb of Osmond, 444

Measles more fatal since the practice of vaccination, 493; evidence afforded by the Glasgow tables, ib.; and by the London bills of mortality, 494; different result from the observations of Dr. Stanger of the Foundling Hospital, 495

Memoirs of St. Francis de Sales, 614, et seq.; alarming appearances on the religious horizon of Europe, ib.; system of popery radically and incorrigibly vile, ib.; still it has produced some worthies, ib.; sketch of the life of Francis de Sales, 615, et seq.; his distress of mind and recovery, ib.; appointed by Clement the VIII. to convert Beza, 616; his zeal in prosecuting his missionary labours, ib.; his astonishing success in turning Calvinists into Papists, 617; visit to the room in which he died, ib.; his canonization, 618

Merse and Tiviotdale, synod of, oppose the formation of a bible society, &c. 286

Moderns superior to the ancient historical writers, in their development of the moral character of history, 103

Monk and Bloomfield's Porsoni adversaria, 355, et seq.; origin of the work, 358; Professor's Inaugural Oration, 359, extract from it, ib.; his defence of Euripides's manner as compared with that of Sophocles, 360-1; his observations varia, 361; notæ et emendationes in Athenæum, 362; on the three Tragedians, ib.; Professor's other works treated of in this volume, ib.; his unpublished works, 363; execution of the work, ib.; see Porsoni Adversaria.

Myers's translation of Rossel's practical treatise on finding the longitude at sea, 88, et seq.; instances of inaccurate translation, 90

Negation, stated by Mr. Wells, of Boston, as the characteristic feature of Socinianism, 267

Newell, Mrs. an American missionary to India, Wood's memoirs of, 582, et seq.; extract from her funeral sermon, 586-7

Niger, supposed by Mr. Park to terminate in the gulf of Guinea, under the name of Zaire or Congo, 212

Norway, Lamotte's travels in, 22, et seq.; cataracts of Gothen, 24, of Halsund, 25; Swinsund, pass of, ib.; Christiania, 26; corps des patineurs, ib.; lake Miosson, 27-8; valley of Guldbrandal, 29; bridge of Ström-Broe, 30; Sneebuten, 31; fatal catastrophe from the disappearance of the Gual river, 34; Røroas, ib.

Numbering, modes of, prevalent in ancient times, 289, instances, 290, and from the Fathers, 291

Observations on certain passages of the Old Testament, &c. in answer to Paine's Age of Reason, 600, et seq.; punishment by the secular arm no answer to objections against revelation, 601; argument the only proper weapon, ib. et seq.; object of the present work, 603; its necessity superseded by the works of Lardner and Paley, ib., author's new principles stated, with objections to it, 604; subjects discussed, ib.; extract illustrating the author's manner, 605

Orange, or Great River, its course and breadth, 149

Organic remains, found near Brentford, Trimmer's account of, 57

Orleans, Duke of, barbarity of the mob to him when hurrying him to be guillotined, 410

———, character of his regency, 106-7, extract, ib.; germe of the French revolution to be traced to this period, ib.

INDEX.

Orthodox Christians called idolaters by Dr. Freeman, 271

Paine's Age of Reason, observations in answer to, on some passages of the Old Testament, cited in the New, 600, et seq. extract illustrative of the author's mode, 605

Palais Royal, cruelty of the mob to the Duke of Orleans, when going to be guillotined, 410

Panoplist, and missionary magazine, 266, see American unitarianism

Paradise of Coquettes, a poem, 86-7, extract, 87

Paris, during the interesting month of July, 1815, 510

—, Scott's visit to, in 1814, 402, et seq.; deteriorated state of morals in France, 403; despotic government, its demoralizing tendency, ib.; character of Buonaparte's despotism, 404; author's reflections on passing through the villages of Normandy, 404-5; observations during his progress towards Paris, ib. et seq.; display the chief feature of the Parisian character, 407; magnificence of Paris, 409, extract, ib.; reflections of the author, ib.; Place Louis Quinze, its recollections, ib.; Palais Royal, 410; barbarous conduct of the Parisian mob to the Duke of Orleans, ib.; cruelties perpetrated by the French should rank among their public monuments, ib.; Paris a city of contrasts, 411; licentiousness of Paris, 412; French females, ib., et seq.; reflections on France in regard to its religious character, 415

Paris spectator, 605, et seq.; accurately descriptive of French manners, &c. 606; picture of modern rural retirement in France, ib., et seq. le colimaçon, 608; translation, ib.

Park's mission to the interior of Africa, 205, et seq.; reflections on the magnitude of the enterprise, 206; Mr. Park's fate certain, 207; contents of the work, 208; hasty sketch of his history, ib.; account of Mr. Park's discoveries, written chiefly by Mr. Bryan Edwards, 209; inquiry into Park's real sentiments on the slave trade, 210, extract, ib.; he settles in Scotland, 211; engages to revisit Africa, ib.; plan of intended operations, 212; delay of the expedition, and its fatal results, ib.; equipment of the expedition, 213; his sanguine hopes prior to its commencement, ib.; arrival at Madeira, 215; extortions of the African chiefs, 216; finally quits the Gambia, 217; encounters a swarm of bees, ib.; fatal effects of a tornado, 218; gold pits at Shrondo, ib.; disastrous state of the expedition, 219; romantic scenery near Sullo, ib.; Issaco seized by a crocodile, 220; Keminoom, a well fortified city, ib.; thievish propensity of the natives, ib.; arrival at the Niger, 221; and at Sansanding, ib.; fits up a canoe, 223; notice of intention to sail, ib.; Issaco returns to the Gambia with Mr. Park's journal, ib.; rumours of his death, ib.; Col. Maxwell engages Issaco to go in quest of information concerning him, ib.; his report, 224; final catastrophe, as reported by the only survivor, 225; inconsistencies and difficulties attending this statement, ib.

Paterson's discourses, 378, et seq.; apparent object of the author, ib.; character of the sermons, 379; objectionable expressions, 381-2, and extract; hints to the author, in regard to acquiring a more correct style, 382

Paul, Emperor of Russia, his death described, 377-8

Pearson on the colouring matter of the black bronchial glands, and of the black spots of the lungs, 60.

Philosophical transactions of the Royal Society of London, for 1813, Part 2, 57, et seq.; account of some organic remains found near Brentford, 57; on a new construction of a condenser and air-pump, 58; on the formation of fat in the intestines of living animals, ib.; on the colouring matter of the black bronchial glands, and of the black spots of the lungs, 60; experiments on the alcohol of sulphur, or sulphuret of carbon, 62; on the means of procuring a steady light in coal mines, without the danger of explosion, 65; additional observations on the effects of magnesia in preventing an increased formation of uric acid; with remarks on the influence of acids upon the composition of urine, ib.; additions to the account of the anatomy of the Squalus Maximus contained in a former paper, with observations on the bronchial artery, 67; some further observations on a new detonating substance, 68; experiments on the production of cold, by the evaporation of the sulphuret of carbon, 70; on a saline substance

MUSEUM BRITANICUM INDEX

- from Mount Vesuvius, ib.; some experiments and observations on the substances produced in different chemical processes on fluor spar, 71
- Philosophy of the human mind, Stewart's elements of, 109, et seq.; nature and use of axioms, 110; definitions, their use in mathematical science, ib.; Euclid's definition of parallel lines, emendation of it, 111; uniformity of the laws of nature, remarks on it, 112; faculty of reasoning not distinct from intuition, 113; subject illustrated, ib.; on the evanescent processes of thought, ib.; instantaneous judgements resulting from them, their frequent accuracy, 114; on abstraction, ib.; its nature, ib.; voluntary and involuntary abstraction, 115; general terms requisite for general reasoning, ib.; prototypes of general terms, what, ib.; mathematical demonstration, its peculiarities, 117; the two purposes of definitions in mathematics, 118; supposed stability in the order of nature, 119, extract, ib.; experience and analogy, their difference, 120-1; Aristotelian logic, its aim, 121; geometrical analysis and synthesis, 125; illustrated, ib.; analysis and synthesis of the natural philosopher, 124; on the use of hypothesis, ib.
- Picture of Paris, 509
- Place Louis Quinze, its recollections, 409
- Poems, by J. Grinfield, 273; poetic description of the morning and evening of an angler's day, 274; on memory, 275; battle of Killisrankie, 276-7; view of the submarine world, a fancy piece, 278; Eneid, specimen of a blank verse translation of it, 280
- Pompadour, Madame de, instance of her great influence over Louis XV, 242
- Pope's universal prayer used in public worship, 271
- Porlier, Marquis de, his skill and activity, 451
- Porsoni Adversaria, 355, et seq.; value of the ancient writings, 355; various errors, &c. to which they are liable, and their causes, ib.; use of the art of verbal criticism, 356; qualifications requisite to constitute a correct verbal critic, ib.; origin of Bentley's epistle to Mill, 357; study of the profane classics conducive to ascertaining the genuine text of the sacred writings, ib.; literary character of Richard Porson, ib.; sketch of some of his literary labours, 358; his lamentable neglect of the sacred writings, ib., et seq. 363; origin, and editors of the present work, ib. et seq.; its first article, 359; extract from the Professor's Inaugural Oration, ib.; his very judicious defence of the manner of Euripides, as contrasted with that of Sophocles, 360-1; his Observationes curae, 361; Notae et Emendationes in Athæneum, 362; and on the Three Tragedians, ib.; other works treated of in this volume, ib.; his unpublished works, 363; execution of this present work, ib.
- Power of God in the soul of man; a sermon, 512-3
- Practical hints for young females, on the duties of a wife, a mother, and a mistress of a family, 91, et seq.
- Profane classical writings, their great value, 355; liable to corruptions, &c. of the text, ib.; use of verbal criticism in restoring the genuine text, &c. 356; study of the profane classics affords an advantageous means of ascertaining, by legitimate criticism, the genuine text of the sacred writings, 357
- Prophecies of the Messiah, by the Rev. T. Robinson, 500, et seq.; subjects treated of ill arranged, 502; extract illustrative of the author's style and mode, 502-3
- Protestant petition to Louis XVIII. praying for protection against the sanguinary persecutions of the papists, coolly received, and not replied to, 620
- Protestants in the south of France, Cobbin's statement of the persecution of them since the restoration of the Bourbons, 618; loyal conduct of the protestants in South France on the restoration of the Bourbons, 618; sanguinary acts of the papists, 619; thirteen protestants killed by one papist, ib.; doubtful policy of the Duke d'Angouleme, 620; attempts on the life of Gen. de la Garde, (note), ib.; Protestant petition to Louis XVIII. imploring protection, coolly received, and not replied to, ib.; extract from a letter written by M. Desmont, senior pastor of the church at Nismes, ib.
- Prosody, Latin, its principles luminously explained. See Dr. Smith's Manual
- Recension, its meaning as used by Griesbach, 6.
- Rencontre between a sleeping Hottentot and a sleeping lion, 145
- Report of the British and Foreign school society for 1815, 513, et seq.; claims of the society, 514; its aims and operations as contrasted with other societies, ib.; disgraceful ignorance of the

MUSEUM BRITAN NICUM

- public functionaries in France at the earlier periods of the revolution, 515; Mr. Martin's school at Paris for training monitors, ib. et seq.; advanced state of Holland in regard to public schools, 516-7; number of its schools and scholars, 518; reflections tending to excite attention to the system of promoting universal education, 519; some lately alleged objections removed, 520
- Robinson's prophecies of the Messiah, 500, et seq.; author's design in three discourses, 501; arrangement of the Essays injudicious, 502, extract, ib. et seq.
- Rocca's memoirs of the war in Spain, 448, et seq.; extent of the period treated of by the author, ib.; distinction between merely military, and national wars, 449; author's entrance into Spain, ib.; picture of Madrid, 450; various adventures of the author, ib.; activity and skill of the Marquis de Poitiers, 451; his route described, 452; houses of Andalusia, ib.; his perilous state at Alhera, ib.
- Romanof, Michael, elected to the throne of Russia, in consequence of a pretended revelation from heaven, 376
- Rörons, its appearance, 34
- Rossel's practical treatise on finding the latitude and longitude at sea, 88; M. Biot's character of the work, ib.; its contents, ib. et seq.
- Russian Empire, Anderson's present state of, 373, et seq.; danger to be apprehended from the enormous power of Russia, ib.; character of the work, 374-5; its authority, ib.; description of Russia, ib.; its tribes very numerous, 375; early history of Russia uninteresting and barbarous, 376; election of Michael Romanof, ib.; death of the Emperor Paul, 377-8
- Sack-race, poetical description of. See Anster-Fair, 125
- Salisbury, or Sarum, Dodsworth's account of the episcopal see and cathedral church of, 434, et seq.; cathedral churches, nature of the associations arising from the contemplation of, ib. et seq.; account of the artists and plates of the present work, 437; subject of the first part of the publication, 439; Dr. Duppa stated to have assisted in writing the EIKON BASILICÆ, ib.; Sarum cathedral founded by Osmund, 440; his character, ib.; grant of King John to the clergy, ib.; desolate situation of the city, 441; Salisbury cathedral founded, ib.; indulgences granted in aid of completing the building, 442; ceremony of annually electing one from the singing boys to personate a bishop, ib.; miracles of the tomb of Osmund, 444; his canonization, 445; tower and spire added, ib.; its great liability to accidents, &c. ib.; inclination of the spire, ib.; supposed relic of the Virgin Mary, ib.
- Sarum, episcopal see of. See Dodsworth's historical account.
- Saxe, Marshal, his reflections on the evening preceding a battle, 248
- Schimmelpenninck's, (Mrs.) theory of the classification of beauty and deformity, &c. 543, et seq.; author's object, ib.; her definition of beauty, ib.; axioms descriptive of her notions, ib.; second and third species of beauty, 544; their contrasts, ib.; objections to the definitions of beauty, ib.; her conceptions ambiguously enunciated, ib.; inquiry if there does not exist some element of pleasure distinct from the principle of association, 515; some of the author's generic terms objectionable, 546; estimate of Mrs. S.'s work, 548; nature of the notes, ib.
- Scott's, Rev. Thos. sermon on the death of Mr. West, of Gawcott, 298 9, extract, 299
- , John, visit to Paris in 1814, 402, et seq.; degraded state of France in regard to morals, 403; demoralizing tendency of a despotic system of government, ib.; features of Buonaparte's system of government, 404; author's reflections on his journey through the villages of Normandy, 404-5; observations in his progress along the road to Paris, ib. et seq.; display the principal characteristic of the Parisians, 407; discordant nature of the impressions excited by a first visit to Paris, 408; magnificence of Paris, 409, and extract; reflections of the author, ib.; Place Louis Quinze, its recollections, ib., and the Palais Royal, 410; barbarity of the mob to the infamous Duke of Orleans, ib.; scenes perpetrated in France during the revolution, to be reckoned among her public monuments, ib.; Paris a city of contrasts, 410-11, and extract; its licentiousness, 412; French females, ib. et seq.; author's qualifications as a journalist, 414; reflections on the religious state of France, 418
- Scott's, Walter, Field of Waterloo, a poem, 570; extract, 575, et seq.

